In the bustling heart of New York City, Karen Lozner has built a world where fashion, fantasy, and fine dining merge into an unforgettable experience. As the visionary behind The Parisian Tea Room and her renowned design school, Karen's School of Fashion, Karen seamlessly blends creativity, elegance, and entrepreneurial spirit. Her journey from Manhattan native to fashion designer, educator, and restaurateur is nothing short of inspiring.

A Journey Rooted in Creativity

Born and raised in Manhattan, Karen was shaped by the city's architecture, diverse cultures, and vibrant art scene. "I've always had an appreciation for art, fantasy, and fairytale-like spaces," she shares. After graduating from the High School of Fashion Industries and the Fashion Institute of Technology (FIT), Karen quickly carved out her space in the fashion world, working as an assistant designer at DKNY and even stepping into the spotlight as a model.

But her most meaningful roles came early: mother and mentor. Inspired by her children's creative spark, Karen founded her design school, initially starting in her basement in New Jersey. Over time, the school grew into a full-fledged academy, expanding into two flourishing businesses in New Jersey and New York City, nurturing young minds in fashion and interior design.

The Parisian Tea Room: A Dream Realized

The Parisian Tea Room isn't just a restaurant; it's an immersive experience. Guests step into an atmosphere reminiscent of 1920s Paris, where every detail—from the vintage decor to the delicately crafted menu—transports them to another era. "It's not just about tea; it's about creating an environment where people feel special," Karen explains. Unlike traditional British high tea, Karen's version infuses French culinary flair, serving croissant sandwiches and desserts that honor French and Italian traditions. Celebrities like Molly Ringwald and Zac Posen have been among its distinguished guests, further elevating its reputation. But what truly sets The Parisian Tea Room apart is its growing role as a fashion and creative hub. Models, designers, and influencers alike have turned it into a space for meetings, photoshoots, and collaborations.

The Future Beckons

Karen's vision doesn't stop at tea. She's preparing to launch L'Étoile de Paris, an upscale cabaret and dining experience in New York City. "I want to create a space where dinner and entertainment merge seamlessly—a place where every meal feels like an event," she shares passionately.

Simultaneously, Karen dreams of expanding her school to Paris itself, introducing French children to extracurricular activities in fashion design and creativity.

Where Design Meets Dining

The connection between Karen's design school and the tea room is deeply intertwined. The tea room began as an extension of her school, offering young students a unique place to celebrate their creative achievements. "It started with little girls enjoying sophisticated tea parties after their sewing projects," Karen recalls. Soon, mothers began requesting their own tea parties, and the idea blossomed into a full-fledged restaurant.

The Secret to Success

Balancing multiple thriving businesses is no small feat, but Karen credits her success to staying focused on her purpose and fostering genuine connections. "I believe in showing up every day with intention and heart. When you love what you do, it reflects in everything you create," she explains.

At her core, Karen Lozner is not just a designer or a restaurateur—she's a storyteller. Every space she designs, every menu she crafts, and every class she teaches tells a story of romance, imagination, and timeless elegance. As she continues to build her vision, Karen remains focused on creating spaces and experiences that inspire and bring people together.
